

AMAZON SALES REPORT

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

This report looks at Amazon sales data to understand how different product categories, regions, and delivery timelines are performing. It is found that Electronics is the leading category, generating the highest revenue. At the same time, the North region has the highest number of order cancellations, which may point to operational issues that need attention. The analysis also shows that the orders when delivered take less than 2 days to be delivered but almost one-third of orders are stuck in In-Transit, suggesting that we need to improve our warehouse functioning.
